CENTURY 21 NY METRO ANNOUNCES HIRE OF PAUL BOLOGNA AS VICE PRESIDENT, RENTALS

(New York, New York, October 31, 2007) Century 21 NY Metro, a full-service Manhattan residential real estate agency, has appointed Paul Bologna as its Vice President of Rentals. In this role, Bologna will be responsible for managing all rental agents, assisting in closings, processing applications with landlords and oversight of the listing department.

“The rapid expansion of the rental division accelerated our need for a highly qualified and well-regarded manager,” explains Mike Simon, president, C21NYC. “Paul is one of those people who inspires trust and loyalty from the minute you meet him, and I am thrilled to have him as part of our management team.”

Bologna got his start in real estate years ago at Feitell Real Estate as an agent. When Andrew Heiberger left Feitell to start Citi-Habitats, Bologna went there to work with him. Recently he was a senior agent at Manhattan Apartments, managing a group of rental agents that generated over $900,000 in commissions per year. At Manhattan Apartments his supervisor was Mark Lewis, who is now C21NYC’s, chief operating officer and vice president, investment sales. Prior, Bologna worked in the Internet technology space in various management positions and also successfully acted as Sales and Marketing Director for a technology company.

“This is an amazing opportunity to join a world recognized brand such as Century 21 NY Metro and to bring my knowledge of the rental process in New York City to aid in growing their rental division, I look forward to working with Mike Simon to achieve his vision for Century 21 NY Metro,” says Paul Bologna, vice president, rentals, C21NYC.
