According to its builders, Windermere on the Lake in Stamford, Conn., is more a 74-acre eco-village cluster of green-built luxury homes. We agree. The land is some of the finest in Fairfield County. I by little stone bridges over streams, a large lake, architecturally sculpted homes with some of the features that man could build and pathways in and out of a 25-acre nature preserve donated by th to Stamford Land Conservation Trust, the landscape is as well-kept and picturesque as Augusta I Golf Course, where they hold the Masters tournament. After taking a drive around the developer weekend, which, when built out, will encompass 24 homes, it's easy to understand the vision of N project's developer, which also owns Lord & Taylor and Linens-n-Things. "This project proves that extraordinary architecture can coexist with a sustainable living model," says Mark Hallett Robbin of Windermere on the Lake. "It's not like living near Central Park, it's like living in Central Park." P at $3.2 million. For more information, go to www.windermereonthelake.com.
